MAILLAGE

Playing with dualities of heft and lightness, infinity and constraint, Maillage is a set of sculptural pendants that express the optimistic possibility of infinite expansion. The column of light appears to descend through the ceiling and hover just above the floor in an anticipatory suspension. A soft glow emits from brutalist forms that alternate with open components, creating a spaciousness that weaves through. The sculptural moment of the curved connection points satisfy a harmonious formal alignment in the chain motif. Maillage illustrates a portion of a larger custom installation and is offered in a variety of finishes and colors.

MAILLAGE

Designed as sculptural columns of light, the chain-like pendant descends from the ceiling and is intended to emphasize the verticality of a space. The hexagonal volumes are offset and overlap creating a negative space while obscuring the light source. A sliver of light from one side is reflected onto its counterpart resulting in a soft diffusion that creates a romanced glow to a room. These segments are connected by open links offering spaciousness through pattern. Maillage illustrates a portion of a larger custom installation and is offered in a variety of metal finishes and a spectrum of custom colors.

Shown in a warm satin nickel finish with a diameter of 6 inches.
